Nba 3 point shooting all time

0 of 50Kevork Djansezian/Getty ImagesThe man who invented the three-point photo? I don't know. Lathered Pacers fans could probably tell you Reggie Miller did. Love you, Indiana, especially Indianapolis.In navy, gold and white, Miller was the air carrier in Indy when it came to firing off threes. He is now a leading contender for the Basketball Hall of Fame, but where do I rank him? It might surprise you. In my opinion in my revealed rankings in the top 50 NBA three-point shooters ever. Reggie! Reggie!50. Derek Fisher: El Presidente1's 50Ezra Shaw/Getty ImagesHe's made some of the most important three-pointers in NBA history. His photographs have ranged from absolute magic to marvelous and wonderful. Not only can he be higher on this list, but he may be in the upper echelon. When it comes to the biggest threes made, he's near the top. D-Fish, the fish that saved the Lakers, is what I call him. Shannon Brown called him El Presidente. Derek is president of the NBA Players Union, and he met face-to-face with David Stern during negotiations. With a tedd to professional negotiation the way to winning championships, Fisher was a humanitarian and a father. The unique sacrifices he made to his daughter and family are well documented. He's a unique three-point shooter. It looks like he flings the ball, like a lot of lefties, but he's going down in NBA history. He is a 38 percent career three-point shooter, and this season, can pass the 1,100 makes. Fisher and teammate Kobe Bryant are aiming for their sixth NBA championship. 49. Derek Harper2 of 50Tim DeFrisco/Getty ImagesHe played for the Mavericks, Knicks, Magic and Lakers. Dallas drafted the high-singed guard with the 11th pick in the 1983 NBA Draft. He stayed in town for 10 seasons. He hit clutch threes at Madison Square Garden in the 1990s, but he remains one of the best players to never make it into the All-Star game. Considered a defensive stopper, first of all, the point guard made 1,070 NBA three-point shots. At 35.4 percent, he proved he can shoot rocks. Harper compares, in height and three-point acumen, with the shooter ranked No. 48 on the list.48. Joe Johnson: A Defender's Nightmare3 of 50Kevin C. Cox/Getty ImagesM signs a maximum contract in 2010, Johnson is shooting 37.3 percent from behind the ring. During his career, he made over 1,100 threes. He looks like Andre Johnson's of the Houston Texans to me. Both are great and quiet and unassuming athletes, assuming you don't mess with them. Don't start, and it won't be without. But, when it is some, it's over. Joe's shot usually appears. A former U.S.A. team member, he was selected by Boston and played as an All-Star for Phoenix.He's played in four NBA All-Star games (2007-10). Smooth shooter's three-point ball looks easy, and in college, he can make them from the tail of the razorback on arkansas's 47th pitch. Cuttino Mobley: Smooth from behind Arc4 three points by 50Lisa Blumenfeld/Getty Images Another Guard with a pure three-point shot, Cuttino is a lefty. He is Moochie Norris without afro. The shooting form of Southpaw looks, um, interesting at times. As they come in with regularity, though, the shot looks lovely. Mobley has made 37.8 percent of his threes in his career and a total of 1,085 of them. He's a clutch, just like the next gunman.46. Stephen Jackson: He's So Nice That Rappers Make Lyrics about His Shot5 of 50Mike Zarrilli/Getty ImagesHe shoots it from tree-point land at a 34 percent pace and he's hit about 1,100 shots. His shooting was an important part of the 2002-03 San Antonio Spurs championship team. Kobe Bryant, Jermaine O'Neal and Tim Thomas are McDonald's All-Americans with him in high school. He is a 36 percent shooter coming into this season. He is now a seasoned veteran, as he admits, and a seasoned veteran is next on the list.44. Dana Barros: Down and Dirty from Deep7 of 50Craig Jones/Getty ImagesLike Quentin Richardson, he appeared in the Three-Point Shootout. Barros shot it out during the 1992-1996 contests. Unlike Richardson, he lost. He set an NBA record, though, by making at least one three-pointer in 89 consecutive games (1994-1996). At 41.1 percent, he's up there with the likes of Steve Nash in the all-time three-point field goal percentage. Barros once shot it at 46 percent from three-point range (1994-95). He retired in 2004 with 1,090 buckets made from worms. Small in stature, he is the opposite of the number 43 shooter on my list.43. Latrell Sprewell: He's Subject To Start a Three-Point Shooting Spree8 of 50Elsa/Getty ImagesUnlike Barros, Sprewell prefers to sport longer hair. It didn't get in his eyes on his three-point shot. A career 33.7 career three-point shooter, Spree made 1,104 of them total with three teams: Golden State, New York and Minnesota.Like Cedric the Entertainer said, Ced's comedy can be compared to Sprewell's game because it suffocates people. Latrell wasn't a choker when it came down to hitting a big three-pointer. I can't say that when it comes to choking his coach PJ Carlesimo.Cheryl Miller believes Sprewell looks like Samuel Jackson. Like Stephen Jackson, Sprewell hit a lot of threes in the clutch. Now if he can free his clutch from... Oh, don't worry. Anyway, the 42nd-ranked shooter had a smooth release in clutch.42. David Wesley: You can from North, South, East or West9's 50Brian Bahr/Getty ImagesM footy baller must be completely behind the three-point line at the time of firing. To form a three-point shot attempt, a player can jump from outside the loop to the inside of the line. He can land inside the line as long as the ball is released in the air. Wesley is one of the NBA shooters who tested this technique. He shot threes at a 36.8 clip for his career, and he made 1,123 field goal attempts from 1993 to 2007.One of the most shutguns on the list, he showed that few men in the NBA can be relied upon for long distance three-point shooting.41. Gary Payton: The Glove can also shoot from Deep10's 50Ethan Miller/Getty Images Ranked No. 41 out of my top 50, putting cats to school in a low position just one of G.P.'s specialties. His three-point shot looked awkward at times. In his early NBA days, though, he sank them with the best of shooters. As a result, he remains one of the most respected point guards ever to play the game. Payton is a career 31.7 percent three-point shooter and made 1,132 of them. 40. Dirk Nowitzki: Mr Germany11's 50Ronald Martinez/Getty ImagesDirk can give any defender a shake. As one of the most quality German imports the NBA has seen, he could have 1,500 three-point making before his career over. While this list is no real center, he has the size, mobility, strength and skill to play all three frontcourt positions. At more than 7 feet tall, Nowitzki is one of only seven goalscorers on this list. The face of the Dallas Mavericks, he is also, perhaps, the most popular basketball player ever from Germany. Nowitzki shot about 38 percent for his career in threes. He's probably the best shooter, who was born overseas, to do it in the NBA. Dirk's shot reminded me of Bob McAdoo's; they're both long and lanky as the number 39 shooter on my list.39. Steve Smith: Is Smitty or Scottie Phippen the best multitasker?12 of 50Tom Pidgen/Getty Images Smitty's three-point shot is smooth as a point guard, out of the dribble if necessary. The holidays quickly pulled up, he was one of the best. Like an official, he wants to lift his arm or extend three fingers to signal field goals as well. An analyst who often works with Cheryl Miller, he had a nice run on NBA TV. He also had a nice run of threes--1,148 of them in his career on 35.8 percent shooting. Reggie Miller, who appears somewhere on my list, has an older sister in Cheryl who is sometimes seen busted up (laughs) at something Smith says in the studio. It seems they share some private jokes. A baller in the of Pippen and Jordan, Smith's shooting was no laughing matter. He's a polymath. In 38th place on the list, the next goal scorer made a lot of defenders burst into tears in their sleep.38. Wesley Person: The Rifleman's Brother Was a 3-Point Shotgun13 of 50Jed Jacobsohn/Getty ImagesHe shot it at a 41.8 clips for his career, first class for crying out loud. The younger brother of Chuck The Rifleman who, Wesley performs 70 threes less than his brother. Chuck pulled up another 600 three-pointers, though, over Wes. Where I come from, Wesley's shooting ability would give him a nickname on the field - you guessed it - Shotgun. Firing from the starting gun, so to speak, the next three-point specialist landed at No. 37 on this list.37. Jamal Crawford: Ball Skills You Can't See!14 of 50Kevin C. Cox/Getty Images Who cares if he, after runs with the Knicks and Golden State, is thriving off the bench for Atlanta? NBA officials and Fantasy players do. He won his sixth NBA Man of the Year last season and is continuing his smooth play this year. Capable of hitting three-pointers off a cross, he is one of the most adept ball handles in the NBA. A 35.1 percent career three-point shooter, he has made about 1,200 of them in his ongoing career. He could finish with 1,600-1,700 of them by the time he was finished. At No. 37 on this list, he is one of the most underrated players in the league. Like the next shooter on the list, he could have a long career in the media.36. Dennis Scott: '3-D'15 of 50Andy Lyons/Getty ImagesFrom 1994-97, the NBA three-point line has been moved in. Scott went on to set a record for most three-pointers in a season: 267 in 1995-96.His jersey number says it's all about his mentality to shoot kicks. Scott delivers the outside punch that compliments Shaq's can in the three-second lane. Along with the like of Shaq, he shot the rock at an average of nearly 40 percent (39.7) for his career. With 1,214 three-pointers made, Dennis was nicknamed Triple-D. He has an NBA television segment of the same name. 35. Chuck Person: The Rifleman16 of 50Tim DeFrisco/Getty ImagesM a three by any other name is still sweet. The Rifleman shot threes at a 36.2 percent clip. He is nicknamed The Rifleman because his mother is said to prefer western TV of the same name. Chuck Connors is the name of the man who starred. Judging by the way he cocked it, Connors had a magical rifle it seemed on The Rifleman. The person is rarely left open with his magical shot cocked behind the bow. Chuck bagged 1,220 threes in his career. With Indiana, he was able to get his shot out, like his teammate, Reggie Miller Time Miller. Like Reggie, Chuck is undoubtedly one of the most intense three-point Bombers in the NBA. Scrunching up his face, talking and pumping fists is common for him after making a three. Most players just had to shoot up like he did after they'd dunked on a behemoth.34. John Starks: A Pesky Shooter in Madison Square Garden17 of 50Chelsea Lauren/Getty ImagesHe played with a giant, Patrick for the New York Knicks in the rugged 1990s and the winning franchise. Starks' three-pointer boosted the Garden crowd during his time there. He is a 34 percent three-point launcher, making 1,222 of them. Most of them, no doubt, come at the Garden Garden in Indiana.Another shooter who loves playing in the garden is number 33 in my list.33. Hersey Hawkins: Big Hawk18's 50Brian Bahr/Getty ImagesDouble H or Hawk gave life to the home crowd whenever the connection hit on a three-pointer. Opponents were amazed at his range and form throughout his playing days. His career lasted 13 years from 1988-2001. During that period, he shot threes at 39.4 percent and made 1,226. Many of them came to Seattle, Wash., as a member of the now de-dee-esting SuperSonics. Like his teammate Shawn Rain Man Kemp tossing his reign of dunking sovereignty, Hawkins made it seem like the rain was actually going down when he shot threes.32. Baron Davis: L.A. Royalty19's 50Chris Graythen/Getty ImagesFecta distance, he's a career 31.9 shooter. He could finish with 1,300-1,400 three-pointers making his career. A Compton, Calif., native, Baron is active in the community and quarterbacks support for a number of causes. He is known to work extensively among making life better for wayward teenagers. The next gunman on the list is also a humanitarian.31. Jason Williams: The Entertainer Formerly Known as White Chocolate20 by 50Chris Graythen/Getty Images The team gunslinger applies to NFL quarterbacks. I want to apply it to Jason Williams to describe how he shot threes. He probably invented a three-point shot in the middle of an expanding style that quickly broke. Formerly known as White Chocolate with all respect for his parents, Williams shot threes at a 32.8 percent clip. He could finish with nearly 1,400 three-pointers. In 2003, together with Dr. Bob Wallace of UT Medical Group, he founded the We Will Foundation. It is a charity for children facing craniofacial malformations.30. Jason Richardson: J-Rich Works Like Magic in Orlando21's 50Christian Petersen/Getty ImagesHe shot threes with beautiful form. J-Rich is a career shooter 37.1 percent from long range coming in this season. The NBA passed the three-point shot in the 1979-80 season. Richardson made nearly 1,300 of them. He is in a system (Orlando) that loves shooting three points, and he could finish with nearly 1,500 threes.29. Dell Curry: Have Three-Point Shooting Sons, Will Travel!22's 50Otto Greule Jr/Getty ImagesSo father, so son. Is Golden State's 3-point ace, Stephen Curry, the same as his father? If Stephon can make 40.2 percent of his three-pointers, then he could end up with more than making his father (1,245). 28. Clifford Robinson: The Power (Forward) of Three-Point Shot23 of 50Jim McIsaac/Getty ImagesThis three-point sniper doesn't need a long look to get his shot. He is one of only three powerful strikers on the list. Robinson retired as a 35.6 percent three-point shooter, making one of them. Portland, Phoenix, Detroit, Golden State and New Jersey benefited from their shooting from behind the loop. The next shooter on the list is a benefit to any organization.27. Mike Miller: Three-point sniper and former Gator24's 50Chris Graythen/Getty ImagesKnown gives his ability to make three-pointers from international range; he was drafted no 5 overall out of Florida by Orlando in 2000.The NBA three-point line was switched back to 23 feet, nine inches (22 from the corners) during the 1997-98 season. It doesn't bother Miller. He was a rookie of the year in 2001. He holds the Memphis Grizzlies franchise record for most points scored in a single game (45). He put it out on February 21, 2007 against Golden State.Miller was a career 40.5 percent three-point shooter. He made 1,255 of them in the 2010 season. He could easily have finished with more than 1,500 threes for his career. 26. Vernon Maxwell: The Mad Max of the 1990s NBA25's 50Ken Levine/Getty ImagesFrom unknown color commentators, he received the nickname for clutching his three-point shooter. Besides having confrontations with fans regarding allegations of spitting, he can pluck basketball from a three-point gap. Born in Gainesville, Florida, he played for the Gators as a 6'4 guard. After Florida, he was a key member of the Houston Rockets' first championship team. Known for his clutch shooting, he hit several game-winning shots throughout his careerMaking a career total of 1,256 three-pointers, Maxwell holding the NBA record for most three-pointers made in a season since 1991-1993.In 1994, David Letterman asked Spike Lee if there was a player similar to reggie Miller's way. Mad Max is Lee's answer. Maxwell destroyed Lee's beloved Knicks in the decisive game of the 1994 NBA Finals between Houston and New York. 25. Mookie Blaylock: Has He Been Ballin' Since He Was a Baby?26 of 50Tom Hauck/Getty ImagesDaron Oshay Blaylock reportedly got the nickname Mookie from his grandmother when he was a child. He was a real baller as a baby I said. He shot 33.6 percent from three-point range and once ranked 15th all-time in career three-point field goal-making (1,283). He ranks eighth in his career with 3 points (3,816).24. Terry Porter: Where will Clyde The Glide Drexler Be Without Him?27 of 50Stephen Dunn/Getty ImagesAt number 24 on my list, Porter shot .386 percent in three field goals in a 17-year NBA playing career. In 1,274 games, he made 1,297 three-pointers. In phoenix sons coaching, he guided Steve Nash's career. Nash is somewhere on this list, I guarantee it. Porter is reliable from deep. On December 16, 2008, the Trail Blazers retired from the number 30.23 shirt. Allan Houston: From Baller to Assistant General Manager28 of 50Otto Greule Jr./Getty ImagesHe may one day have his own retired Knicks jersey. He's their assistant general manager. Houston also now spends its time helping various charities and nonprofits. Born in Kentucky, he was one of the top three-point shooters in the NBA during his playing days with the Detroit Pistons and New York Knicks.As a supreme technician; for his career, he shot threes for a very good 40.2 percentage. Mr. 1,305 three-ball bats. He earned money and ranked my number 23.22. Kobe Bryant: Black Mamba29's 50Ezra Shaw/Getty ImagesThe Black Mamba's finger-pointing at his teammates days are over—the Lakers are supreme champions. Kobe's three-point shooting is one reason why. He's probably still capable of scoring 80 points in a game. He made a lot of three-pointers in that game. Kobe then broke Scott's record for three-pointers made in a game. He shot it at 34 percent from the three-point line and made about 1,400 of them. Mamba's skill set is often compared to the next shooter on this list.21. Vince Carter: Captain Carolina Comes to the Land of the Sun30 of 50Sam Greenwood/Getty ImagesLike Kobe, the shooting guard known as Half Man, Half Amazing is one of the best jumpers in NBA history. A former dunk champion, he can also shoot from three-point ground. He made nearly 1,400 threes and shot at a 37.5 percent clip for his career. He played the same position as the 20.20 ranked marksman. Mitch Richmond: 3-Point Marksman Supreme31 of 50Doug Pensinger/Getty ImagesM another shooting guard on the list, Mitch is one of Michael Jordan's toughest opponents, according to Mike. Perhaps because while being strongly built, Richmond shot threes at 38.8 percent. He connected on 1,326 in his career with the Warriors, Kings, Wizards and Lakers.19. Mike Bibby: Moving on Up the NBA Career 3-Point Shooting List32 of 50Mike Ehrmann/Getty ImagesThe junior Bibby shoots a three-pointer at around 38 percent for his career and he could end up very high on the list. He entered this season with 1,500 threes done at hand, and he is still in his early 30s.18. Dan Majerle: Thunder Dan man33 of 50Eliot J. Schechter/Getty Images Thunder Dan specializes in threes with Phoenix and Miami. He made 1,360 three-point shots for his career and shot 35.8 percent from long range. Thunder Dan! Thunder Dan!17. Antoine Walker: Because Four-Point Shots Come Few and Far Between34's 50Stephen Shugerman/Getty Images Not many people are fooled about their three-point effort stats. Instant play back has sometimes been used. The NBA and NCAA specifically allow play-backs for this purpose. Antoine Walker probably never fooled out of a three-point attempt or make. A bombers 32.5 percent three-pointer, he was once asked why he fired so many threes: Because it wasn't without fours, he replied, drawing chuckles from reporters. He tried 4,264 of them and made 1,386 in his career.16. Brent Barry: Bones Had a Jones for Threes35's 50Otto Greule Jr/Getty ImagesNow an NBA television analyst alongside Dennis Scott, they are two experts who know something about the three-point shooter. Barry (left) shot it at an excellent 40.5 percent for his career. He made 1,395. Well done, like a hand. next on this list.15. Michael Finley: Three-Point Shots and Sportsmanlike Conduct36 of 50Ronald Martinez/Getty ImagesThe Chicago native and former University of Wisconsin star shot 37.5 percent for his career and and 1,454 three-pointers. The no.4 sports jersey with Spurs, with the Celtics, he is the team-mates with the next top scorer on the list.14. Paul Pierce: P. Squared Up 37 of 50Gregory Shamus/Getty ImagesHe's another player who could finish with nearly 2,000 three-pointers made. He entered the NBA in 1988 and he made nearly 1,500 of them on 37 percent shooting. At number 14 on this list, one day you can pass 13.13. Steve Nash: A Ventriloquist with a Talking Basketball38 of 50Christian Petersen/Getty ImagesAn artist with the basketball, the two-time NBA MVP (2005-06), has one of the highest three-point shooting percentages on this list. For his career, he made more than 1,520 three-pointers while shooting them at 43.1 percent.12. Nick Van Exel: Nick Van Exel39 of 50Streeter Lecka/Getty ImagesThe left-hander has made 1,528 three-pointers in his career with six holds. He shot three-balls at 35.7 percent for his career. Van Exel represents point guards, but he's like a combined guard like the next shooter on this list.11. Tim Hardaway: Stay with His Crossover If You Can40 of 50Harry How/Getty ImagesDid he invent the crossover pull-up for a three-point bucket move? Some people will tell you he did. He will tell you he created it in Chicago. He was one of the first NBA ballers to be widely credited with a killer cross. Hardaway made 35.5 percent of his three-pointers. He made a staggering 1,542 of them from my list is incredible as well.10. Eddie Jones: What Could Have Been with the Lakers Had Kobe Flopped41 of 50Streeter Lecka/Getty Images Starting in 1994 with the Lakers, the former Temple Owl shot 37.3 percent for his career and made 1,546 threes. Jones (right) is the kind of NBA baller who can shut his opponent down completely and also come out from the ground three points.9. Glen Rice: Former Michigan Wolverine and LA Lakers Sniper 42 of 50Robert Laberge/Getty ImagesThe small forwards rank third on this list behind only Peja Stojacicov and Rashard Lewis, Rice is the only one of the three winners of the championship. The three-point ace shot 40 percent from deep for his career and made 1,500 threes and made 1,700 made this season. Mr. Big Shot, as he is known, is one of the more clutch shooters on the list.5. Peja (Peja) Get Him and Dirk Shooting Together Someone Please46 of 50Elsa/Getty ImagesHe's the best three-point shooting small forward to grace the NBA, according to the stats. He shot tritectas at 40 percent and made more than 1,700. He is walking proof that the NBA cares. The mission of his Children's Fund is to help children and their families with food, shelter and economic well-being in his hometown and New Orleans. 4. Dale Ellis: A Sniper with the Rock, He Deserves More Credit47 of 50Todd Warshaw/Getty ImagesOne of the most highly rated shooters in NBA legend, Ellis has been with eight different NBA teams. Longevity has its place in American professional sports. In a long and outstanding NBA career, he has amassed 1,720 buckets of three points on 4,266 attempts, a 40.1 percent shooting percentage. Recently tallied with No. 4 by the next shooter on this list, he sinks dozens of threes in many ways similar to the number 3.3. Jason Kidd: The Dishr Could Now Drop More Threes Than Dimes48's 50Ronald Martinez/Getty ImagesRight now, he's the most adept three-point shooter to play point guard. This season, he could also pass Dale Ellis for a total of three-pointers made. Kidd shot overall at 34.9 percent.2. Reggie Miller: The Garden's Greatest Villain Finally Outshines Sister49's 50Elsa/Getty ImagesCheryl! Cheryl! New York Knicks fans are probably still scared the day they chanted his sister's name in his presence. With 2,560 career goals, he has more than half of the goals on this list. Reggie! Reggie! shot an outstanding 39.5 in threes for his career. He could be one of the few on this list to make the Basketball Hall of Fame. With him on top of the Hall, I was inspired to do my part to honor the occasion.1. Ray Allen: Hands Down, Man Down Around Ray-Ray's Way50 by 50Ronald Martinez/Getty ImagesMore than making an occasional triple, Allen will get over 2,600 threes by the end of this season. During his career, he has made about 39.8 percent of his threes. In the 2005-06 season, Ray broke Dennis Scott's record with 269 three-pointers made. The former baller for the UConn Huskies will end his career with a hefty amount of three-point shots made, the most in NBA history. History.
